

The advent of summer with almost all the society folic in town is a noveity, and as a result the social calendar is still well filled. The next two weeks, however, will witness a general exodus to the mountain resorts. There are always a few indoor affairs to be given to close the season, but the sooner they are over with the sooner town houses can be closed and the social horde to the country hie.

The past week's affairs clustered which the beauty and season and the social horde to the country hie.

can be closed and the social borde to the country hie.

The past week's affairs clustered chiefly about the Fourth and were of a patriotic description. For the coming week, few affairs are promised. Tomorrow evening Mrs. A. W. The tendency of the people to open every holiday at some of the resorts has a most depressing effect upon any social events that may be arranged. Nearly all of the young people of Davis county went to the Lagoon or to the lake resorts on Tuesday, and in most of the towns the day was for that reason a very quiet one. It is said that more than 2,000 Davis county people celebrated at the Lagoon, many of them remaining during the evening to enjoy the dancing and boating. There were local dances in most of the towns of the county Tuesday evening, but they were not largely attended. open every holiday at some of the re adjourned its meetings until the second Wednesday in September. they were not largely attended.

The benefit ball that was given on Tuesday evening in the Kaysville musichall for the assistance of William Garlick, a Cuban war veteraft who is sick, was attended by about 150 people, all of whom had a pleasant time. During the evening Williard S. Burton gave a comic recitation, a plane duet, "America Forever," was rendered by Mrs. Minnle Blood and Miss Fmily Barnes, and the local quariette club sang "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," giving as an encore "The Story of a Tack." The hall was beautifully decorated with national colors. The event was a successful one financially, as well as socially. odus from the city begins Wasatch is filling up rapidly with its summar colony. Tucked down in the mouth of the canyon, this little spot is an ideal one for those in search of rest and relief from the city heat. Above the hotel at either hand the gray cliffs stretch thousands of feet skyward, their bold faces dotted here and there with patches of vividly green scruboak. Tail pines cling in the crevices of the cliffs and one wonders whence they receive their nourishment, so steep and precipitous are the walls of the canyon, with scarce a handful of earth anywhere which would give sustenance to things that grow. Yet the trees and brush are there, softening the harsh, bare rocks and adoing much to their picturesqueness. But down here where the creek tumbles and roars so incessantly we seem at the very bottom of things. Of days the sky is bluest of blues, what little of sky we see, and at night the stars are so bright that one might almost pluck them from the sky. If one climbed to the black crags that stretch so near to them.

The old Wasatch hotel has been entirely rebuilt and nearly doubled in size this year. It stands just at the edge of the tumbling stream—in truth, it is built partly over it, and is almost buried in great cottonwoods and boxelders and poplars, through which the canyon breeze draws continually, singing a soft treble accompaniment to the deep baritone of the stream. The new hotel is under the management of John Starley. With its increased capacity it has accommedations now for 150 guests.
